The essential oil from the leaves of Myrtus communis L. (Myrtaceae) was obtained by hydrodistillation and analyzed by GC/MS. The essential oil was composed of 62 compounds with alpha-pinene (25.8%), beta-pinene (17.2%) and 1,8-cineole (20.8%) as the main compounds. In addition, the antioxidant activity of the essential oil and its major compounds was evaluated by the 2,2-diphenyl-1-picrylhydrazyl (DPPH) radical-scavenging method, the microsomal lipid peroxidation assay and the ferric reducing antioxidant power (FRAP) assay. The main constituents of the essential oil were found to exhibit antioxidant activities and, in particular, 1,8-cineole was more active than alpha-pinene. The field of this invention relates to the preparation of poly(amido-amine) polymers and to the products of the polymerization. Poly(amido-amine) polymers (PAMAM) are useful in a number of applications such as disinfectants, antistatic agents and as a fuel additive. More recently, PAMAM have been used in applications such as treatment of plastics, including polyethylene, polypropylene and polyethylene terephthalate (PET), to reduce the number of breaks in polymer films. PAMAM are also useful in the treatment of poly(vinyl chloride) (PVC) and polystyrene. The use
