How to get better from a bad start How to get better from a bad start “You can take a horse to water, but you can’t make it drink.” We are all so familiar with this saying. Whether we are taking our horse to the river, to the sea or to a new career, how do we best prepare it for the challenges ahead? As many experienced horsemen know, a rough start to a season can very easily derail your plans. So how do you get a bad season back on track again? What can you do if you have made a poor start to a riding career, riding school or centre? It is true that you can’t change the past but you can shape the future. The first thing you need to do is accept that you have got yourself into a mess, and are going to need to do something about it. Yes, it can feel like you are being negative and you may worry that you have hit a black day and will never be able to bounce back. You don't have to be this way. You can start being proactive instead of negative. You are probably thinking of all the reasons why you got yourself into this mess in the first place, not just in terms of your riding but all round life too. We are all human and we all make mistakes and have to deal with the consequences of these. So accept the reality of what has happened and start planning how to change this for the future. The most important part is accepting that you have screwed up and now you have a job to do. Do this in a positive way and be honest about your mistakes. It may be that you are just going to have to be honest and admit what you did wrong. It is a good idea to sit down and ask yourself honestly: What have you done? Why did you do it? What was your motivation? Why were you not aware of the consequences of your actions?

What can you do about it? If you answered these questions honestly, you will probably be able to understand what you have done

A couple in Canada are worried their 11-year-old daughter is about to undergo radical surgery after she was diagnosed with a condition known as faecal impaction. Sara Greenhalgh and her husband Rick have been informed their daughter has a severe blockage in her intestines, which if not treated soon could lead to the removal of the girl's intestines. The family, who have not been named for privacy reasons, moved to Canada from the UK when Sara was pregnant. Greenhalgh told Daily Mail Australia she was shocked when her daughter came home in December and told her she had 'dodgy gas', however the family were too concerned to take her to a doctor. Sara Greenhalgh and her husband Rick have been told 4bc0debe42
